

Katherine Morgan – Bio

Katherine Morgan started embroidery and sewing when she was nine years old. By the time she was a teenager, she was volunteering to do the family's mending so her Mom wouldn't ask her to help cook! She went on to sewing clothes and household items, and when her children were little, baby items and quilts....and now grandbaby sewing.

Katherine joined a quilting guild in 2002, and discovered the magic of rotary cutters, chain piecing, and quilt retreats. She loves to explore with colour and design, and has published several original quilt patterns.

Katherine often finds that starting a new quilt project leads to "what ifs" that take her merrily off in new directions. Katherine enjoys teaching quilting workshops and encouraging other quilters to explore their own "what ifs" and embrace their creativity.
